Career Management Firm Develops New Software Features 3x Faster

A career management firm that provides coaching, talent development, and outplacement services needed help speeding the release of new software features.

The Challenge

Before reaching out to Datavail, the client already had a small application development team. However, they felt as though they were stagnating in terms of efficiency. It was simply taking too long to get new features out the door.

The Solution

The client got in touch with Datavail in order to supplement their existing on-site application support team. Datavail quickly partnered with the client to provide a customized, flexible sprint team using the Sprint Teams as a Service (STaaS) model, with the express goals of improving business efficiency and software performance.

The Results

Since joining forces with the client, Datavail has delivered new software features three times faster than the client would have been able to do in-house. The Datavail team helped them bring applications to market with greater speed and efficiency—including several mobile apps.
